Future opportunities

Religion, Philosophy and Ethics teaches students how to think critically, challenge assumptions and construct arguments. It also helps them to develop a broad understanding of the beliefs that influence societies and individuals. As such, it is highly regarded by universities and employers and equips students well for a broad range of careers including in Law, Medicine, Psychology, Business, Journalism, Media etc... Students often subsequently go on to study 'Religious Studies', 'Philosophy', 'Religion and Ethics' or 'Theology' at university. Philosophy is a particularly popular choice as part of a joint honour's degree, for example, 'Philosophy, Politics and Economics' ('PPE'), 'Philosophy and Computer Science' or 'Psychology, Philosophy and Linguistics' ('PPL').
